The mission of the Environmental Law Institute is to advance environmental protection by improving law, policy and management. Through its Indoor Environments program, ELI works to improve public health and reduce risks from indoor environmental problems, with a focus on strengthening the role of state and local government policies and programs in this area.

ELI's policy analysis addresses key issues for improving the indoor environment. For example in October 2007, ELI developed Green Cleaning in Schools, a short report that provides information on selected state laws, proposed/un-enacted state legislation, and school district policies. Other materials produced by ELI include reports on state and school district policies promoting healthy, high performance school design and construction.
